Hat With Visor Brim

By LaRacontence.

Military she will be—at least she designs her headgear along military lines. But, having taken a helmet of the most severe lines, she discards the harshness of material and fashions from velvet the hat to her liking.

Of not too dark a blue is this hat, with visor brim and domed crown, the narrow chin-strap of velvet held in place by two small blue enamel buttons. At the front, a brilliant red cockade of ostrich and beneath this a fringe and fleur de lys of gold and silver braid. Truly, it is a brilliant hat in spite of its severity of outline.

Fish Dishes Big

Aid to Housewife

Offer a Chance to Change Daily Menu—No Danger From Canned Goods.

The housewife welcomes as an agreeable change the many fish dishes that are possible, not only by the use of fresh fish but that which comes in bottles or cans. The former, of course, is more desirable, though the latter is so perfectly preserved by modern methods that it can be converted into most acceptable dishes. Canned fish is now so carefully prepared, the cans are so different and the methods so changed that the contents are well preserved. Shrimp and some other fish are even put in little linen bags before they are sealed up in the can, in this way they retain their brilliant coloring, which was formerly blackened by contact with the tin.

Other fish have their biggest bones removed before canning and are so pressed that when they are turned out of the can they look as if they had been freshly molded. They may be covered at once with cucumber or asparagus aspic, and when chilled, served on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise without breaking them before serving.

The following tested recipes for new fish dishes may include some novelties which the housewife will be glad to add to her cook book.

Tuna Fish Mignon—Drain one medium-size can of tuna fish and flake it with a silver fork. Add to it a gill of melted butter, pepper salt, a tablespoon of chutney sirup, a tablespoon of chopped parsley, a gill of cream and three tablespoons of bread crumbs that have been fried in butter and carefully drained. Chop and add two cold-boiled eggs and the stiffly beaten white of one egg; mix all together and fill well buttered ramekins with the mixture, grating a little English cheese over the top of each. Bake a delicate brown. These may be served hot or cold; garnish each with a slice of delicately toasted bun.

Salmon Peppers—Drain one medium size can of salmon and flake the fish with a silver fork. Add to it a quarter of a cup of dried bread crumbs, pepper, salt, a gill of melted butter, the juice of one onion, a tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce, a quarter cup of grated cheese, one cold boiled egg chopped and the white of an egg stiffly beaten. Fill half pepper shells with the mixture, laying them on a buttered baking dish, and bake a delicate brown in a medium oven, basting once with a tablespoon of melted butter. Serve as a garnish with broiled steak.

Shrimp Salad—Take two cans of Bataria shrimp, or a pint and a half of freshly boiled shrimp, flake them with a silver fork and add to them two finely chopped cucumbers that have had the seeds removed, a half cup of chopped celery and one red pepper cut in very thin strips. The shrimp should be allowed to marinate 20 minutes in French dressing, then be drained and the other ingredients added. Mix all well with good mayonnaise and serve on white lettuce leaves garnished with olive rings.

Buttered Mussels—If fresh, steam the mussels open, remove from the shells and saute in butter, pepper and salt for two or three minutes until they curl; then serve on slices of toast garnished with fresh cress. If bottled, drain carefully and remove the whole spices that are often in them, rinse through cold water, wipe dry on a linen cloth, then saute in the butter, adding a generous dash of red pepper and a pinch of salt, and serve on toast in the same way.

Clam Pie—Steam open, after thoroughly washing the shells, four dozen round clams. Make a rich cream sauce, not too thick, and add the clams to it and a dash of celery. Drain the juice of one onion and a dash of mignonette pepper. Have ready as many large ramekins lined with good pie crust as are needed for the number to be served; fill them with the mixture and put on the top crust, which should be perforated with a silver fork. Bake until the crust is done. Serve as a hot entree or cold for a luncheon dish. These pies should be cooled naturally but never chilled.
